The Short Answer: Cop body cameras

Each week, we ask the mayoral candidates a question. We give them 50 words to answer it. Got a question? Send it to dan.kelley@metro.us

Policing. Metro asked the mayoral candidates: Do you support the use of police cameras worn on the chest of an officer for documentation of encounters with citizens? Why?

"I support the use of technology, including body cameras, to improve relationships between police and communities. Recorded activity should be retained indefinitely and reviewed both randomly and after complaints by police or citizens. Cameras provide an opportunity for objective, third-party review."

Doug Oliver

"Yes, I support body cameras. They will be essential in creating a culture in Philadelphia where police officers respect the rights of all Philadelphians and Philadelphians feel truly protected by their officers."

Jim Kenney

"I do. Because they work. Studies show body cameras significantly decrease use-of-force reports and police complaints. They provide accountability for cops and citizens. However, they are just a piece of the solution; ending stop and frisk, deploying hotspot cameras, zero tolerance for hate speech — all play a part."

Anthony Williams

"Absolutely. As the tragic murder of Walter Scott in South Carolina showed, video evidence provides an impartial account of disputed incidents. Most police officers are brave and honorable, and video will support their stories, but the public needs to have confidence that officers who abuse their power will be appropriately disciplined." Nelson Diaz

"We must embrace the role that technology can play in addressing crime and public safety. I support having each patrol officer wear a body camera and equipping each police patrol and investigative vehicle with a dashboard camera."

Trying to get an Egg McMuffin today? You can expect walkouts and picket lines with that.

Protests of working conditions in fast food chains across the nation and in Philly are set for April 15.

Members of Philadelphia Fight for 15, 15 Now and 32BJ SEIU are expected to participate in daylong demonstrations to demand a raise to $15 an hour.

"Workers chose Tax Day because the date, 4/15, is their demand ['For 15'] and because they want to highlight the fact that they are paid so little that too many are forced to rely on public assistance to get by," organizers said.

Organizers said the march will include current or former employees of fast food giants like McDonald's, Wendy's, Burger King, KFC and Dunkin' Donuts, as well as adjunct professors, home care, nursing home, industrial, laundry and airport services workers, college and high school students, #BlackLivesMatter activists, faith leaders and City Council-at-Large candidates.

State DAs fight guv on death penalty

Gov. Tom Wolf exceeded his authority when he imposed a death penalty moratorium in Pennsylvania, a statewide association of prosecutors said in court papers on Tuesday. Wolf announced a halt to executions in the state in February, saying they led to endless court appeals. Just three people have been executed in Pennsylvania since the state reinstated the death penalty in 1978. Six people condemned to death have been exonerated since that time. Philadelphia District Attorney Seth Williams sued to have the moratorium overturned.

Till the crack of dawn

Philly politician wants to allow bars to stay open until 4 a.m.

Unlike party cities like New Orleans that rock all night, Philadelphia sees most of its nightlife dry up and fade away around 2 a.m. when bars are legally required to close.

But one state legislator wants to change that.

State Rep. Jordan Harris announced Tuesday he is introducing legislation to authorize "extended use permits" to certain bars that would allow them stay open until 4 a.m., the standard closing time for bars in New York City.

"We need to create an environment where the nightlife encourages young people who become educated here to stay in our Commonwealth to live, work and play," Harris said.

Clearly, Harris knows some people who are under 30.

"While I understand nightlife isn't the only concern for those making a decision on whether to stay in cities across Pennsylvania or move, I do know that it is a concern, one that we can fix, enhance and as a city, benefit from," his statement continued.

The extended-hours permit isn't intended for local neighborhood bars but for bars in areas with high economic activity, Harris said. METRO

Narco. Cop on victims: 'I'd slap them around'

Jeffrey Walker / PPD

A former Philadelphia narcotics officer who has pleaded guilty to robbing a drug dealer testified against his former colleagues in federal court on Tuesday, laying out how the group targeted dealers they thought would lead them to cash they could steal.

"White males, college boys wearing khaki pants, easy to intimidate," Walker said of his group's preferred targets. "We'd catch them doing whatever they were doing, we'd scream at them, sometimes get physical. I'd slap them around. These guys crack under the pressure."

Walker, now 46, was caught in 2013 in an FBI sting in which he planted drugs on a suspected drug dealer to put him in jail. That dealer turned out to be an informant for the FBI, and when Walker burglarized his house to steal money and marijuana, the feds arrested him.

On Wednesday, he used the clipped, matter-of-fact tone that is typical of law enforcement testimony. But he wasn't there as a police officer anymore.

"I decided I wanted to save myself," said Walker, who faces a life sentence.

The nearly 24-year veteran of the Philadelphia Police Department told the court about his career as a cop and a crook in the city's 16th District.

The amount of money he was able to steal grew as he climbed the ranks of the department until he made it into the elite Narcotics Field Unit.

Walker told the court that Officer Thomas Liciardello, one of the defendants, was the de facto leader of the drug squad, a position he gained because of his talent for finding dealers to rip off.

"He was a money maker. He produced good jobs," Walker said. "If a guy is producing jobs and you know he was stealing money, you do what he tells you."

But Walker said he also had a falling out with the group as he went through a messy divorce in 2009 and his alcohol consumption increased.

He is expected to return to the stand today to be questioned by defense lawyers. DAN KELLEY

Veggies. North Philly gardeners challenge PHA plans for lot

Angelique "Pooh" Beard, garden supervisor, speaks with Philadelphia Housing Authority Police at the North Philly Peace Park community garden on Tuesday. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

A group of North Philly residents is up in arms after the Philadelphia Housing Authority erected a fence around the North Philly Peace Park, claiming they've lost access to a garden where they grew fresh vegetables for the neighborhood.

"We came in, cleaned it up, planted food in the ground," said Pili X, an organizer at the Peace Park, which is located at 24th and Bolton streets, between Oxford and Jefferson streets.

Broccoli, spinach, squash, collard greens and peppers are among the crops that local volunteers planted last week in anticipation of the spring. X said the produce is given away for free to neighbors.

"This community is definitely one of the worst neighborhoods as far as a food desert is concerned," he said.

But the PHA said they need the land to build 57 units of affordable housing as part of the planned Blumberg-Sharswood housing project.

They've offered the gardeners two parcels for gardening around the corner and are in talks with the community gardeners about offering them green space in the housing project's final design, according to a PHA spokeswoman.

"We're working with Peace Park and looking forward to working with them as we revitalize the neighborhood," the spokeswoman said.

PSPCA to reopen animal adoption centers

The PSPCA announced Tuesday that dog adoptions would be open to the public and heavily discounted this weekend after all signs of Canine Infectious Respiratory Disease (CIRD) have vanished from their adoption facility.

PSPCA adoption centers were closed since March 12 due to the CIRD outbreak. But after two full weeks without symptoms, CIRD is no longer a threat.

"No dogs died or had to be euthanized due to the outbreak. The dogs are now healthy and ready to be adopted with no risk to families," the PSPCA said.

Boko Haram Islamic militants have kidnapped at least 2,000 girls and women since the start of last year, turning them into cooks, sex slaves and fighters, and sometimes killing those who refused to comply, Amnesty International said on Tuesday.

The human rights group's 90-page report based on dozens of interviews with witnesses and escaped abductees comes a year after the group seized more than 200 schoolgirls from Chibok, a community deep inside an area of northeastern Nigeria the fighters claimed as their caliphate. The kidnapping, and a video showing the captured girls dressed in dark hijabs soon afterward, provoked international outrage. But the majority are still missing despite Western pledges to help track them down and a Chadian attempt to broker their release.

Boko Haram's leader, Abubakar Shekau, claims the girls had been "married off" to his fighters. REUTERS

Scientists are taking a budding interest in using chemicals in marijuana to treat epilepsy. / GETTY IMAGES

Study: Pot component can relieve epilepsy

Interview.
Cannabidiol can help those suffering from seizures.

Great news for epilepsy patients: A new study by NYU Langone Comprehensive Epilepsy Center found that some children and adults with treatment-resistant epilepsy may find relief with cannabidiol, a compound in medical marijuana that does not contain psychoactive properties. Though there have been many anecdotal reports of medical marijuana being beneficial to epilepsy patients, this study by Dr. Orrin Devinsky is the first of its kind.

The study's participants were prescribed cannabidiol in a liquid daily dose. For the 137 patients who completed the study, the number of seizures decreased by an average of 54 percent throughout the 12-week period. We talked to Dr. Devinsky about the study and why he thinks it can mean huge changes for those with epilepsy.

Would you say this treatment is unprecedented?
It is in the field of epilepsy. Medical marijuana products have been used in other disorders in European countries, but not for epilepsy, and though a lot of people are being treated with medical marijuana products, you still don't know what's in there; it can vary from batch to batch. The standards for a drug company tend to be a lot higher than for the artisanal producers in a state like Colorado.

Do you think this came about because marijuana has become legalized in parts of the U.S.?
That might partly be the impetus for the interest because there were reports from states like Colorado where they saw dramatic improvements in children with epilepsy, and that was part of the excitement that led us to be interested in trying this.

When will the medication become available?
It would be hard to imagine it would be available before one and a half to two years. The FDA won't approve a medication without data from a randomized double-blind placebo-controlled trial.

ANDREA PARK
@andreapark
andrea.park@metro.us

Side effects

Are there any side effects from the medication?

The major side effects we've seen are tiredness — that's the most common one. Other side effects we did see in children included weight loss and diarrhea because it's administered as an oil, so some kids had a response to the oil.

Dr. Orrin Devinsky / PROVIDED

We saw decreased appetite in over 10 percent of patients.

I don't think we'll know until we get that double-blind study if it's as effective as it's been in this study. I think it might be huge for people with epilepsy, but until we get this data, I think we just won't know.

Perceptions

Do you think your study will help change the perception of medical marijuana?
I think the evidence has been coming in for a while that there are medical benefits for marijuana. There's good evidence that THC can relieve nausea for people with cancer and HIV and multiple sclerosis. We need to do more scientific studies, and we'll probably find there are more medical benefits.

The boat, carrying about 550 migrants in total, flipped about 24 hours after leaving the Libyan coast, according to some of the 150 survivors who were rescued and brought to a southern Italian port on Tuesday morning, Save the Children reported.

What happens if you can't pay your taxes?

April 15. Tax experts weigh in on what to do when you end up in the red after filing.

Stop freaking out and start problem solving. / ISTOCK

Affluent clients facing a big tax bill often have one of two reactions, according to CPA and financial planner Jerry Love: They either try to avoid filing or they want to negotiate a deal.

Neither is a good strategy, he says. Failing to file a tax return triggers much bigger penalties than failing to pay (5 percent versus 0.5 percent per month). And despite television ads to the contrary, settlements aren't easy to win, particularly when you have assets the IRS can go after.

The consequences of owing the IRS are severe enough that people should search hard for ways to pay. That may include borrowing money from friends or family, drawing money from a home equity line of credit or selling investments held outside retirement accounts. Sometimes clients who say they can't pay actually have the means, just not the cash, says CPA Jonathan Gassman.

Before pulling out a credit card, though, taxpayers should calculate the costs versus the IRS options. For those who can pay quickly, just not right away, the tax agency offers an extra 120 days to pay without a formal installment agreement.

During those 120 days, taxpayers will owe penalties of 0.5 percent per month on the unpaid balance plus interest, currently at a rate of about 3 percent. Installment agreements lower the penalty rate to 0.25 percent a month and cost $120 to set up (or $52 with automatic withdrawals from a bank account). All in, installment plans typically cost 8 percent to 10 percent a year and can be extended for six years, Love says.

Using a credit card, meanwhile, triggers an upfront charge of about 2 percent, and balances accrue at the card's rate, typically 15 percent or more.

Many people think they can get extra time to pay by filing an extension, but that's not how extensions work, says Lisa Greene-Lewis, a CPA and tax expert for TurboTax. Taxpayers are expected to estimate and pay what they owe by April 15, even when they request six more months to file the actual return. REUTERS

Tip

Always file

Those who can't pay should still file returns on time to dodge the failure-to-file penalty and start the clock that typically limits IRS audits to three years from the filing or due date, whichever is later, Gassman says. Those who owe $50,000 or less in taxes, penalties and interest can file online for an installment agreement. Those who owe more are subjected to more paperwork and scrutiny.

Budget. How to survive wedding season without going broke

When the fancy papered wedding invites start piling up, getting invited to a friend's wedding can be more stressful than exciting. C.K. Alexander, wedding expert and creator of "Love Ink" and "The Single Bride" blog, shares her tips for getting through spring's wedding season without going into debt.

Listen up bridesmaids, you have an expensive summer ahead of you. / ISTOCK

Start a wedding season fund

Prepare your bank account for the wedding season by starting to save as soon as you can. Alexander suggests making a wedding fund, putting $10-20 aside each week or month so that, at the end of the year, you have a nice chunk.

How to save on wedding gifts

The good thing about a registry is that the bride and groom really want everything on it. So even if you can only afford to get something small, they'll be pumped.

Alexander also says not to rule out DIY gifts. "One of my favorite DIY ideas is making a wine box," she says. Decorate the box however you want and include the couple's favorite bottle of wine inside. "Ask the bride and groom to each write a special note to the other person. Slip them in the box, and they'll have a sweet surprise to read while enjoying the wine."

Shopping secret

How to get your bridesmaid's dress for next to nothing

"Think of renting a bridesmaid's dress on a specialized site, such as RentTheRunway.com," Alexander says. Another great tip: plan way ahead. "Shop outside of wedding season when prices are lower. Department stores offer big discounts in September." If you have multiple weddings to attend, don't let social media stop you from wearing a dress more than once. "Just update your outfit by wearing different accessories for each wedding," Alexander says.

Saving on bachelorette parties, bridal showers and more

It stinks to be the one responsible friend fronting the money for all the obligations leading up to the wedding. One person alone should not be responsible for covering any entire event, including bachelorette parties and bridal showers. "The bridesmaids should know up front all the costs associated with the wedding and instead of buying individual gifts, share the cost of one big gift to give collectively," Alexander says. Charlize Theron is totally surprised that she's engaged

Considering that during her nine-year relationship with Stuart Townsend she was vehemently against walking down the aisle, it's understandable that even Charlize Theron was not expecting she'd be engaged to new beau Sean Penn after just over a year of dating. She's shocked by the development, I tell you. Or rather, she tells you, via Esquire: "For both of us, there was never a moment where we thought that this — what we have today — would ever even be a possibility. Ever, ever, ever," she says. "I think we're both finding ourselves at this moment in our lives kind of shocked. Both of us. Just when you think you know how things are supposed to go down, life just kicks you in the ass and guess what? You don't have a clue." That is a pretty unpleasant way to describe getting engaged, but maybe that's just what life with Penn is like?

Tori Spelling recovering from Benihana burns

It's not nice to laugh at someone else's pain, sure, but honestly this story about Tori Spelling falling onto a hibachi at Benihana is so absurd, I can't not include it. And seriously, have you been to a Benihana? I'm genuinely surprised we don't hear about this happening more often. Anyway, Spelling was just finishing up a delightful family brunch at the Japanese chain restaurant — wait, Benihana does brunch? — when, on the way out, she caught her heel on something, tripped and fell "onto a scorching hot grill," a source tells TMZ. "She shouted in pain from a large burn on the back of her right arm. You could tell she was hurting, but she was trying to put on a brave face for the sake of her four young children who were obviously quite worried." Spelling initially tried to treat the burn herself, but ended up hospitalized at the Grossman Burn Center in West Hills, California, where she underwent a skin graft. Yikes.

Katy Perry and John Mayer, again?

The on-again, off-again nature of Katy Perry and John Mayer's relationship is officially making me dizzy. The sometimes couple was spotted out to dinner recently in L.A. with another couple and "definitely" looked like they were together, a source tells E! News. They were apparently packing on the PDAs, "acting cozy" and holding hands throughout dinner, which must've made eating awfully cumbersome, but whatever. They were last spotted acting suspiciously friendly at a party in January, so maybe they're just on a strict quarterly dating schedule?

Mumford and Sons not down with Tidal

Marcus Mumford and his band of Sons weren't invited to be part of Jay Z's big, fancy Tidal streaming music party with Madonna and Rihanna — which they totally don't care about, OK? "We wouldn't have joined it anyway, even if they had asked. We don't want to be tribal," Mumford tells The Daily Beast. "What I'm not into is the tribalistic aspect of it — people trying to corner bits of the market and put their face on it. That's just commercial bulls—." So there, Jay Z. No neo-folk for you!

Stephen Hawking sings — and flies

Anglophile nerds, rejoice. For this year's Record Store Day, the gentlemen behind Monty Python got none other than Stephen Hawking to sing their perspective-fixing ditty "Galaxy Song" from "Monty Python's The Meaning of Life." Yes, Stephen Hawking sings — well, sort of. Hawking's appearance was part of the Pythons' recent string of live shows in London, but now you can enjoy it as well. Whenever life gets you down, that is.

WILL THE FILLMORE THEATER FINALLY OPEN?

Expect Thursday's press conference with Mayor Nutter, Live Nation executives and developer Michael Samschick and his LA-based partners to be about the opening of the cornerstone of the Canal Street North project: the 3,000-seat Fillmore Theater. In the works since 2012, the Fillmore, located at the former Ajax Metal Company property off Frankford and North Delaware Avenue, should open in the fall. Following his Fillmore announcement, expect Samschick to mention possible neighbors, including a distillery (could this be the rumored new home of Philadelphia Distilling?), a bowling lounge and a country-themed restaurant owned by Toby Keith.

The Fetfatzes family already owns Bella Vista Beer Distributor, Hawthornes Cafe, The Cambridge and the space that housed the Antiquarian's Delight flea market. Rumor has it the family just purchased 941 S. Eighth St., the long-vacant spot that was once Sam Grasso's, a grocery store and deli. Word has it that the Fetfatzes are drawing up blueprints for a restaurant maintaining the building's facade.

Singer Christina Perri ("Jar of Hearts") will open on Ed Sheeran's massive fall tour. "Bring on the cheesesteaks and Tastykakes," she says, looking to pack in the crowds for her hometown gigs in Philly in September. Perri will also pair with Colbie Caillat for a show at the Mann on July 11.

Former Philly resident John Legend and his Get Lifted production company will produce "Sing It On," an a cappella competition for Pop network. Legend was in the a cappella group Counterparts while a student at Penn.

New Jersey's Jon Bon Jovi is also getting into reality TV with "If I Wasn't a Rock Star," a show taking rock stars back to their hometowns and pretending they had never become celebrities.

Celebrity sightings

Kathleen Owens, Leon Huff, Mary J. Blige and Derrick "DC" Corbett at WDAS-FM's Women of Excellence event for Sheroes.
HUGHE DILLON

- On Saturday, WDAS-FM hosted a Women of Excellence event at West Philly's First District Plaza in tribute to Sheroes, including Universal Companies' Faatimah Gamble, "Weekend Today" news anchor Sheinelle Jones and Mary J. Blige. WDAS says next year, they'll rename the prize the Mary J. Blige Award.
- The BLINGO to Cure Duchenne charity event Saturday at Rittenhouse Hotel featured local celeb bingo callers John Bolaris, Stephanie Stahl and Ed Rendell.

Bob Saget: 'I'm not even that raunchy'

Interview. The comedian doesn't resent getting confused with Danny Tanner — at least, not that much.

Bob Saget does two shows at TLA (334 South St.) on Saturday. Tickets are at www.livenation.com. / NATALIE BRASINGTON

You probably knew him first as the endearingly dorky dad of three on "Full House" — then had a jaw-dropping moment when "The Aristocrats" came out, and Bob Saget told the filthiest, raunchiest joke you ever heard. Nowadays, he's somewhere in between. We chatted with Saget while he was prepping for a short comedy tour, including a stop at TLA here in his hometown.

I'm from Philly, too. Philly crowds are the best, right?
They're pretty high up there. You can't be disingenuous with a Philadelphia audience. And it's my hometown — every person looks at you and goes, "Pat's or Geno's?" and stares into your eyes because they want to know the truth.

I can't see your eyes since we're on the phone — should I even bother asking which? You could be lying.
I've had good ones at Pat's and at Geno's. That sounds like I'm a total kiss up.

Quoted

"You can't be disingenuous with a Philadelphia audience." Saget

Do you think at this point everyone buying tickets to see you knows how raunchy your act can get?
I'm not even that raunchy. I'm so much less raunchy than everyone else who's doing it — people are a lot filthier than me now. It started with an HBO special called "That Ain't Right" in 2007, and I must have said "f—" 300 times. That's the one that was definable as, "Oh my god, that's not the dad from 'Full House!'" Which is just absurd because that's a character I played on a TV show. I think people didn't realize there was acting involved — which just makes no sense.

Could we call that a testament to your acting skills?
Exactly. At this age, I've turned it into "What an amazing actor I am. It's an homage to me." But I've also grown, through many years, to understand that it's a gift. To not draw any attention to it, to pretend I wasn't on one of the most famous family sitcoms of all time, would just be ludicrous.

So what can we expect from the upcoming shows?
Well, it's kind of what I've been doing for the past 35 years.

OK, so just sum that up for me — 35 years of your life.
I'm very positive these days. Everybody's in a very negative zone, and they're into very critically putting things down. ... My stuff may be a bit irreverent, but it was never meant to be hurtful. I don't do a roast. ... I have different stories I want to share. Some of them are personal. So I mix jokes with — well, analyzing your comedy, for anyone, is the kiss of death. Just show up.

These days, it's hip to be a homemaker. Turn to any lifestyle blog or site like Pinterest, and you'll find savvy 20- and 30-somethings whipping up gorgeous recipes and tending to their gardens.

"We're rewriting the rules," explains Brit Morin, founder of Brit + Co., an online "destination for the DIY generation."

"Many of our grandmothers didn't have the option to have a career. Then our mothers felt a lot of pressure to invest all of their time and energy in their careers," she says. "For our generation, we're lucky to have a choice. It's OK to do both, and many of us want to do both."

For those of us wanting success at work and to come home and bake a cake from scratch, Morin's new book, "Homemakers: A Domestic Handbook for the Digital Generation," helps bridge the gap between plugged-in career girl and domestic diva. She shows us how.

Embrace technology

Need inspiration? Look no further than your computer. "We have access to an incredible amount of information — take advantage of that," says Morin. "Just as technology has impacted the way we communicate and the way we buy things, it has also transformed the home." One project she loves from the book is the wireless charging nightstand. "I love incorporating technology into the home in a seamless fashion," she says.

Remember to 'unplug'

As much as we rely on technology, Morin believes we need to unplug too. "Taking 'analog' time is incredibly important," she says. "Carve out time each week to completely disconnect and get creative. At Brit + Co., we actually take one day each quarter to learn a new creative skill — we call it Creativity Day. People have learned everything from woodworking to cheese making."

Don't let time constraints stop you

Everyone is always busy, but your lack of free time shouldn't scare you away from pursuing creative projects. "Homemaking doesn't have to be about spending all of your time at home. You can add personality into your home with small projects," says Morin. Two time-friendly DIYs she recommends from her book are etched glasses (below) and a balloon backdrop.

"You wouldn't expect glass etching to be as easy as it is," she says. "Plus, these make the perfect personalized gift."

As for the balloon backdrop, "it's one of my favorite party tricks," says Morin. "Simply blow up a bunch of balloons, string them together using fishing line and hang them up in rows on your wall using painter's tape. Simple as that!"

"Modern homemaking is putting your own personal spin on the concept of creating a home and pursuing your interests, and for everyone, that's a bit different."

"This DIY has endless possibilities," says Morin about etching glass. "[It works on] everything from vases to unique drinkware."

When it comes to wine, break rules, not bottles.

LESLIE GEVIRTZ
@MetroPhilly
leslie.gevirtz@metro.us

The old saw about having red wine with meat and white wine with fish is just asking to be shattered, but without shredding a wallet.

There are some guidelines that will make red go better with fish, and they are easy. If you are simply poaching filets of delicate white fish like cod, flounder, trout or sea bass, then white is the way to go. There are plenty that can be found for under $15 — Austria's Gruner Veltliner, Italy's Vermentino, Muscadet from the Loire or whites from Portugal or Greece.

But if that piece of cod, fluke or hake is a bit thicker and being baked in a tomato-based sauce, then a light-to-medium-bodied red such as a California pinot noir, or a Portuguese Vinhao, or a Morellino di Scansano from Italy's Piedmont region or a Beaujolais from France is best.

Salmon, tuna, monkfish and swordfish easily go with a red — especially if the chef has tarted them up with a peppery crumb crust. Now reds with a bit more body and a bit more zip can be called in: Zinfandel or Tempranillo or Garnacha.

And, of course, there is always rosé.

We found 10 reds — all with a SRP of $15 or less (and a few under $10) — for the next time you want to break that white wine with fish rule (see left). If these specific wines are not available at your local shop, not to worry. The merchant should be able to recommend a similar bottle. But if they can't, it may be time to find another shop.

More than emotions apply to penalty decisions

Re: 'Criminals are people, too' (Metro, April 14)
Serving in our system of justices is not a venue for expressing one's individual beliefs, emotions or morality. It's the duty and responsibility of objectively seeking truth and weighing the facts in alleged criminal or civil misconduct — this in accordance with set criteria.

In Tsarnaev's sentencing, the government is seeking the death penalty; such is application of federal law.

The jury's task is to decide whether the government has proved this as a just punishment and thus proved all the conditions of the sentence required:

What of his motive and logic in the commission of these crimes? Were these crimes of greed or passion, or an assault on our very way of life? How heinous were his acts and what do they speak of his humanity? What of the extensive planning and premeditation (as not committed in a whim of passion)? What of the extent of the death, pain and suffering done to others? What of his lack of remorse? What are his prospects of redemption and rehabilitation?

That said, the jury's job is to weigh his guilt and objectively decide if the elements of his crimes warrant a lesser sentence — such sentence conditional on all the above.

Season finale

76ers wrap up 2014-15

The 76ers' offseason will begin approximately at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday night, when their season finale at home against the Miami Heat (a 8 p.m. start on CSN) concludes. As soon as the final horn blows, the countdown to the draft lottery begins.

MCW all smiles in Philly return

NBA. Former 76er and reigning Rookie of the Year Michael Carter-Williams loved his time in Philly.

Michael Carter-Williams anticipated a reaction in his return to Philadelphia. He just didn't know what type of response it would be.

The 76ers unveiled a video montage, and the fans gave him a nice ovation in pregame warm-ups.

"I had no idea, and I didn't know what to expect," Carter-Williams said. "I was only here for a year and a half so I didn't know what it was going to be like coming back. But I'm happy for the reception I got. One of my coaches told me they did a little video tribute for me so I was happy to hear that."

MCW, the reigning Rookie of the Year with the Sixers last season, returned and played a stellar game in a 107-97 victory for the Milwaukee Bucks. He scored a season high — tying 30 points on 11-of-17 shooting and added five assists, five rebounds and three steals in 30 minutes. More than that, Carter-Williams ran the offense with the poise of a 10-year veteran.

"We tried to keep his minutes down, but we wanted to get him some work," Bucks coach Jason Kidd said. "He wanted to get a win. You could see he was playing at a very high level, and he's been doing that for us for the last couple weeks."

Carter-Williams was selected with the No. 11 pick two years ago and was supposed to be a key building block in the rebuilding phase of the Sixers. Even after a Rookie of the Year award, he was traded to the Bucks in a stunning deadline deal.

MCW is now headed to the playoffs while the Sixers are trudging back to the lottery.

"It's real exciting for me because it's my first playoffs and the first for a lot of the guys here," Carter-Williams said. "I'm happy with what's going on. I was happy to see my old teammates and coaches. I had a very good experience here."

Carter-Williams is starting to flourish with the Bucks. He posted his second 30-point performance over the past four games after having just two with the Sixers.

"I was just trying to be aggressive," Carter-Williams said. "I was getting the ball and trying to attack the lanes and get to the rim, and I knew if I did that, good things would happen."

Good things are definitely on the horizon for MCW.

NHL Playoffs

The race for the Stanley Cup begins

The action begins Wednesday night as four series begin in the 2014-15 Stanley Cup Playoffs.

Senators at Canadiens (7 p.m., NHL Network): Montreal will likely go as far as Carey Price, their goaltender who is a front-runner for MVP, takes them. They lost the season series to Ottawa 3-1, but Price (1.96 GAA, .933 save percentage, 44 wins) will be a force to be reckoned with.

Islanders at Capitals (7 p.m., USA): John Tavares had a breakout year for New York, and the Islanders could have a little extra to play for as they try and extend the lifespan of Nassau Coliseum.

Blackhawks at Predators (8:30 p.m., NBCSN): Two potent goalies will contend in this battle in the West, with Pekka Rinne vs. Corey Crawford taking center stage.

Flames at Canucks (10 p.m., USA): It's an even matchup that could easily go seven, but the Flames will need their top line to lead them to victory.

La Salle alum, broadcast legend Raftery lauds Big 5

College Basketball. CBS hoops announcer Bill Raftery is proud of his Philadelphia roots but not of the current NCAA landscape.

Bill Raftery is having a great year so far. At age 71, the 1963 La Salle University graduate was chosen to broadcast his first Final Four for CBS in March — a feat similar to that of legendary Phillies broadcaster Harry Kalas, who broadcast his first World Series at the age of 72 back in 2008.

On the sixth anniversary of Kalas' death, Raftery was enshrined into the Philadelphia Big Five Hall of Fame on Monday.

"The Big Five still has the best coaches. It still has the best players, and it still has the best fan support," Raftery said. "I think that's a tribute to this wonderful city."

Raftery's broadcasting career officially began back in 1982. He said he would have spot jobs while a coach at Seton Hall before then because ESPN trusted his track record in March. None of his teams ever reached the NCAA tournament, and he reached the NIT just twice.

"[They said], 'We want to have a guy in our booth in March who we're sure won't win an NCAA tournament,'" Raftery said jokingly. "That began my broadcasting career."

Raftery coached Seton Hall for 11 seasons, compiling a 154-141 record. He lauded good friend Herb Magee, who eclipsed 1,000 wins in February in his 48th season at the helm of Philadelphia University. Magee was honored with a plaque at Monday's ceremony.

"I love to have Herbie around because he has over 1,000 wins," Raftery said. "I like to say that between Herbie and I, we have 1,100 wins. Thank God he did so well."

As a player at La Salle, Raftery set a then-freshman scoring record by totaling 370 points. He averaged 17.8 points per game his sophomore year and helped lead the Explorers to the NIT as a senior in 1963. He was once compared to La Salle great Tom Gola, before a back injury derailed his playing career.

He's created a slew of memorable calls and catchphrases over the years, from "Send it in, Jerome!" when Pitt senior Jerome Lane shattered the backboard on a dunk in 1988 to "Onions!" whenever a shot is made in a close game. He became the 42nd La Salle inductee into the Big Five Hall of Fame.

The 2015 class also included Stan Hochman (Media), Ugonna Onyekwe (Penn), and Pepe Sanchez (Temple).

If you don't recognize Raftery, you'd probably know his voice. / GETTY IMAGES

Taking on the NCAA

Bill Raftery knows the NCAA as well as anyone, and he is not particularly fond of its current stranglehold on athletes and sports.

- "The NCAA and television have ruined the game in a lot of ways," the former Seton Hall head coach said. "One way is if you don't make the NCAA then you're not a good coach, and you're really not that good of a team. If you don't advance in the NCAA [tournament] then you've really let everybody down. They've lost focus of what it's really about. I think maybe some people that think the game and follow the game know that you just can't [make the tournament] every year. It's impossible. The blue bloods can, but for other programs, it's all about working hard, getting good kids, getting degrees and putting it together for four years and hopefully walking into the tournament and making some noise."

NBA Power Rankings | by James Toscano

No. 1

Warriors (66-15)

In the final installment of Metro's NBA Power Rankings, the Warriors go into the playoffs with the most power. Not much of a shock here, but this is the pick to win it all in 2015. Just too much talent.

No. 2

Cavaliers (52-29)

Well, this is why LeBron James went back to Cleveland, right? To be the hero and deliver a championship to the city.

No. 3

Clippers (55-26)

The Clippers are 13-1 over their last 14 games, with only a 110-106 loss to the Warriors as the black mark.

No. 4

Rockets (55-26)

The Rockets find themselves with the No. 5 seed with one game left, but that might not be so bad since they'd play Portland.

No. 5

Spurs (55-26)

The most believable and unbelievable thing in the NBA is that the Spurs always get it together.

No. 6

Hawks (60-21)

Thabo Sefolosha will miss the rest of the season with a broken leg suffered during an altercation outside of a New York nightclub.

No. 7

Blazers (51-30)

Arron Afflalo has a shoulder injury that could sideline him for the start of the playoffs, and Nic Batum left Monday's game hurt.

No. 8

Grizzlies (54-27)

The biggest issue for Memphis is Marc Gasol's sprained ankle, leaving him less than 100 percent as the playoffs approach.

No. 9

Mavericks (49-32

Getting out of the first round will be a big upset as the Mavs will face the Spurs, Clippers or Rockets.

No. 10

Bulls (49-32)

Sure, it was against the Sixers, but Derrick Rose's 22 points over the weekend is a positive any way you look at it.

No. 11

Raptors (48-32)

If the Raptors win their final two games, and the Bulls lose to the Hawks, Toronto is the No. 3 seed and plays the Bucks.

No. 12

Wizards (46-34)

The Wizards went 0-3 against the Raptors this season and 2-2 against the Bulls. They'll get one or the other in Round 1.

No. 13

Thunder (44-37)

To get in, they need to beat the Timberwolves Wednesday, and the Spurs need to beat the Pelicans.

No. 14

Pelicans (44-37)

They are controlling their own destiny. Win and they're in. Of course, it won't be easy against the Spurs.
